Burglary Awareness at Christmas

As Christmas approaches, the Constabulary tends to see an increase in burglaries across the county and this includes North Herts. To prepare for this seasonal trend, North Herts, Detective Inspector Mike Keane, who leads the district's Local Crime Unit, has written to 500 residents in Hitchin, Letchworth, Baldock and Royston to warn them about burglary risks and to give them crime prevention advice.

The 500 people who have been written to live in current 'hotspot' burglary areas and locations where addresses were targeted last Christmas.

Detective Inspector Keane said: "I do not wish to alarm people and would like to reassure local residents that myself and North Herts' Chief Inspector Julie Wheatley are doing all we can to use all available resources to tackle this seasonal increase in burglaries, identify those responsible and bring them to justice.

"Offences can happen during the daytime and evenings when occupants are not at home. Entry to properties has been gained via both front and rear doors. Last year, on occasions considerable damage was caused, so offenders were not covert in their actions. I also believe some offenders spend time in the area prior to offences being committed, often taking time to research the streets and levels of activity.

“Over the coming weeks in the lead up to Christmas we will be increasing our high visibility and covert patrols. And I’d like to urge residents to be more vigilant. You are best placed to know when something looks out of place in your neighbourhood. If you suspect a person is in your neighbourhood to commit a crime or you see a vehicle in suspicious circumstances please don’t hesitate to contact us, so officers can attend and determine whether the person/vehicle is there lawfully.”

Mike added: “Residents can also help us in the fight against burglary by securing their homes. There have been some great advances in home security technology and the costs are coming down all the time. Whilst it is still important to remember to secure windows and double-lock PVCu doors, by lifting the handle and turning the key to engage all the safety features, there are now security cameras and lighting that can help to make your home even safer.

“Criminals will always prefer to target unoccupied homes. If you give your home a lived in look, by using a timer switch to turn on a light, radio or TV, when it gets dark then criminals are more likely to avoid your home.”

If you see anyone behaving suspiciously around your street, please report it to police via the non-emergency number 101 straight away. If however, you feel could be witnessing a burglary or any other crime in action, please dial 999 immediately.

Hertfordshire Constabulary would also recommend residents consider the follow crime prevention advice to further secure their homes:

- Ensure doors are double locked at all times. Keep windows closed and locked.
- Consider installing a door bell camera, internal camera and/or monitored burglar alarm.
- Install ‘dusk to dawn’ external lighting and use timer switches in your home to control internal lights, radios and a simulated TV.
- Keep keys and valuables secure and out of sight.
- Ensure boundary fences are secure with side gates locked. Keep tools and ladders in a locked shed.

Farmers dig out crime in North Herts

Farmers in North Herts are digging deep to prevent crime.

Following discussions around crime prevention at the annual barn meet in North Hertfordshire; local farmers are now taking further steps to protect their crops and fields from criminal damage.

Their latest crime prevention initiative involves digging trenches at vulnerable locations on their land to prevent vehicles being able to access fields.

“This year we have seen a large increase in the number of reports of criminal damage to crops by off road vehicles driving across private land, either as a result of being involved in illegal hare coursing or just to cause a nuisance,” explained Neighbourhood Sergeant Guy Westwood.

“We have been patrolling the land as much as we can, but it is a huge and difficult area to police. By digging ditches at vulnerable entrances to fields we can hopefully prevent vehicles gaining access and seize those that get stuck.

“This is just one of many crime prevention initiatives we are trailing in the rural areas - we are also starting to issue land owners with dash cams to help capture vital evidence.

“We have a very good relationship with our local farmers and land owners and I am delighted that they are working with us and have adopted this latest preventative approach. I hope this will result in a decrease in the number of reported crimes relating to crop damage.”

Motorists and pedestrians advised to take care in cold weather

Advice is being issued as the temperature looks set to drop over Winter

Side roads and unsalted pavements may be dangerous and difficult to navigate

Take care and allow extra time for journeys

As the temperature looks set to drop over winter, the Constabulary is advising motorists of the potential dangers of freezing ice and snow.

Side roads in particular could still be difficult to negotiate as thawing snow turns to ice. Unsalted pavements may also be dangerous.

Superintendent Richard Liversidge, who is based within the Force's control room, said: "Hertfordshire is in for some very cold weather this month and next and I would ask that everyone travelling around the county take some common sense precautions. This includes ensuring you have adequate clothing and footwear for the harsh weather conditions.

"The temperature could drop below freezing temperature which could lead to black ice on roads and pavements. Please take care and allow extra time for your journey. Indeed, if your journey isn't important then consider making it later in the week when forecasters say the weather will improve."
